

The Bulletin

Norwich, Wednesday, May 6, 1914.

VARIOUS MATTERS

Tuesday's hard rain spoiled many of the magnolia blooms.

Local botany students are collecting some interesting fern fronds.

May devotions were held in St. Patrick's church Tuesday evening.

Indian societies in the larger cities have been celebrating the feast of St. Sebastian.

Spiritualism sale today. Salads and bean supper 20c.—Adv.

The shower early Tuesday morning was accompanied by heavy thunder and sharp lightning.

The few warm days started city residents to country and shore, in search for summer homes.

On Mohegan boulevard, the lands of the Connecticut college have been marked by conspicuous signs.

This year the state Sunday school convention is to be held in Trinity church, Meriden, in November.

Special lunch today at noon at the Wauregan house for 50 cents each.—adv.

Most of the schools will be closed Friday on account of the Eastern Connecticut Teachers' association convention.

Friends in Norwich learn that Mrs. Carleton, wife of Dr. Dudley Carleton, now of Springfield, Mass., is seriously ill at her home.

At the annual banquet of the Plainville Business Men's association, the toastmaster was N. Elmore Clark, an alumnus of Norwich Free Academy.

Delegates are elected to attend the state convention of the socialist party. The place where the convention is to be held will not be announced until May 15.

"A Regiment of Two" again tonight at the Church of the Good Shepherd. Tickets 25c.—Adv.

Bulkeley school botany class will make the first of its annual trips Friday to Montville under the supervision of Mr. Lawrence. They will collect specimens of early flowers and plants in the vicinity of Cohegan rock.

The paintings sent to London for the Anglo-American exhibit included canvases by a Lyme artist, Childs Hassam, who shows a Young Woman Reading a Letter, which he values at $7,500. He has five other pictures.

Attend Sheridan's reception Thursday evening, May 7th, T. A. B. hall. Drew's orchestra.—adv.

City Treasurer Fitch L. Comstock of New London has been authorized to go to the state capital at Hartford to secure a $10,000 play-ground, and for $5,000 in favor of Mr. Palmer for Ocean Beach improvement.

A beautiful garden is to be made on the point of land which stretches to meet the extreme end of East Main street, where it curves at the beach. Evergreens and spruces are being set out and many flowers have been planted.

Church Improvement society birthday supper at Second church parlor today at 5.30 p. m. Price, a birthday offering. Orchestra.—Adv.

The beautiful book, Old Silver of American Churches, which was loaned to Peck library for Merchants' week has aroused so much interest that the owner has generously consented to let it remain in the library until the close of the Academy term in June.

The use of dynamite as an aid in farming was demonstrated at the R. A. Rutherford place at East Lyme Saturday afternoon. Swampy land was drained, large rocks and stumps were removed and holes were made for apple trees, with the use of dynamite.

In Groton borough election Monday, 369 votes, the largest number in any borough's history, were polled. Of that number 172 were straight party, 117 were independent, and 80 were split ticket. C. F. Landolph, a native of Montville, was re-elected warden.

The Parish house association will hold a spring sale of fancy articles, flowers, cakes and candy Wednesday, May 6th, 8 to 5 p. m., at the Osgood Memorial.—adv.

Monday evening the New London common council approved the report of the street railway committee granting permission to the Shore Line Electric Railway Co. to erect a high tension wire, extending from the power house in Division street to the East Lyme street railway's lines on Town hill.

First annual smoker under the auspices of Federal Union, Thursday evening, May 14, in Froelichkeit hall. Athletic events and refreshments.—Adv.

WEDDING.

Shea—Carberry. Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock John P. Shea and Miss Mary Carberry were united in marriage in St. Patrick's church by Rev. Thomas A. Grumbly. James A. Carberry, best man, and Miss Mary Shea was bridesmaid. Both bride and bridesmaid were handsomely received and breakfast followed at the home of the bride at 226 Yantic street.

There was a large gathering of relatives and friends. There were a number of pretty and useful gifts. After their wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Shea will reside in Greenville. She is a native of Volantown, the son of John J. and Elizabeth Burke Shea, and is employed as a clerk in the telephone plant of the United States Fish and Game Commission. His bride is the daughter of the late James A. and Mary McBurnett Carberry and has resided at 226 Yantic street. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Shea wish them a happy and prosperous future.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Ephraim L. Brown. After an illness of about two or three weeks, Mrs. Ephraim L. Brown died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Andrew Corning, No. 156 Franklin street, Tuesday morning at 1.30 o'clock. Death was due to heart trouble. Mrs. Brown had not been well for the last two years. Her maiden name was Marie E. Barnes and she was born in Lisbon, 74 years ago. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eliza Barnes, she married Ephraim L. Brown in 1857. She was a member of a Baptist church in New London and attended the Christian Science services in this city. Mrs. Brown survived by her husband and sister, Mrs. Andrew Corning.

At C. L. U. Meeting. At the meeting of the Central Labor Union in Carpenters' hall on Tuesday evening, President William J. Fitzgerald presided. Addresses were made by W. H. Wiener of it and there workers and Simon Blake of the haters, two New York men, who spoke in the interest of union-made goods.

The national forests of Chili cover about seven million acres.

PERSONALS

Mrs. D. Paul Dugan of Deep River is visiting in Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Staplin and son have returned to Montville after a brief visit in Stonington.

Harry Wickwicz of Yantic, has been making a brief visit at the home of his mother in Cohegan.

Lou Bennett, of Montville, has been the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Bennett of Chester.

Howard Sharp of Washington place entertained his father, whose home is in Brattleboro, Vt., over Sunday.

Mrs. Thomas Thorne of Hallville left on Tuesday night for Allenwood, Penn., to spend a few weeks with her sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hitchon and daughter Betty of Boston, are passing two weeks in Boston with Mr. Hitchon's sister, Mrs. Harry Wright, of Tufts college.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Partridge of Brewster's Neck had as Sunday guests Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Partridge and son of Mystic, William Harvey and Miss Florence M. Oronok, of Plainfield, and Miss Marion Carpenter of Ashaway, R. I.

SUPERIOR COURT

CASES WERE SETTLED.

$10,000 Damage Suit and $8,500 Suit For Alleged Agreement.

There were three matters on the list assigned for trial in the superior court here on Tuesday, but one of them was settled out of court and a settlement was reached in another after the trial had proceeded part way.

The case settled out of court without coming to trial was that of Turcott vs. Uncas Power Co.

Jean B. Turcott, who is administrator of the estate of his son, Stanislaus, sued the Uncas Power Co. for the statutory sum of $10,000 for the death of the boy on June 16, 1912 at Tatfield near the dam of Victor Marycaule.

The young man was instantly killed by an electric shock which he received when he picked up a wire dangling from one of the company's telephone poles. The claim was made that this was a dead wire that had been hanging there some time, but that it had become charged with an electric current of high and dangerous voltage by contact with the wires of the Uncas Power Co.'s high tension line strung over the same poles, all the wires being uninsulated. Attorneys J. J. Desmond and T. E. Babcock represented the plaintiff and attorneys E. W. Higgins and Joseph T. Fanning represented the defendant. The amount of the settlement was not stated.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

When the case in a jury was chosen for the trial of the case of Jeremiah O'Brien vs. Elizabeth O'Brien, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis J. O'Brien, O'Brien is the stem-mother of the plaintiff, who sues his father's estate for the sum of $8,500. In his complaint it is stated that the plaintiff, in 1831, when he was about 16 or 17 years old, he gave up school and went to learning the trade of a carpenter upon the estate of his father, O'Brien, that if he would do this he would pay him by giving him two pieces of land, one 88 ft. wide on East Main street, and also work for his father as a bartender and did carpenter work and took care of the property for him.

MOLDERS HERE IN CONFERENCE

Connecticut Valley Conference Board Presented Key of the City When Mayor Welcomes Them—Address by E. L. Murphy, Business Agent of Eastern New England Conference Board—At Theatre in the Evening.

Twenty-three delegates presented their credentials in Carpenters' hall, Tuesday, 12.15 George W. Wallace, president of the Connecticut Valley Conference Board of the Molders' union was called to order by Thomas Wallace, president of Norwich union. No. 126. President Wallace made a brief address of welcome, gave a historical review of the local union and then introduced Mayor Timothy C. C. Murphy as the speaker. Admit a burst of applause. Mayor Murphy took the floor. Mayor Murphy said he was an honorary member of the Norwich local and well remembers back 21 years ago when he was active in the work of the union. At the time the union was instituted he was made treasurer.

Mayor Murphy Makes a Hit. Mayor Murphy extended a hearty welcome to the visiting delegates and expressed the hope that the conference would prove a success. He urged conservation in the convention and promised to speak again today (Wednesday) when there will be a larger representation of delegates. He spoke of organization generally, speaking of the business men of whom ranks as one of the leaders in this city. In closing his address the mayor expressed the pleasure he took in the visit of the delegates and the work of the city. Mayor Murphy was heartily applauded.

Harmony in the Industry. A member of the International Executive Board, William Johns, of Boston, with headquarters in Cincinnati, was introduced to the delegates. He expressed his pleasure at being able to attend the meeting, the first anniversary of the Connecticut Valley Conference Board. Mr. Johns complimented Mayor Murphy for having been a member of the Norwich local, and spoke of the matter of strikes he said the New England board and executive board of the International Brotherhood of Molders union sanction them only when they were justified in doing so. He said there has been no demand for wage changes in the past year. He said the prevailing harmony between employer and employee. Mr. Johns said he believed that the organization was doing its work and through it more recognition of the molders is being obtained than ever before.

Welcome From Secretary Fitzgerald. A welcome to the delegates was extended by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L. U. of Norwich. He said that the delegates were a pleasure to this city should prove a pleasant one. The meeting was then turned over to the conference board president Wallace of the Norwich local.

Delegates President. President Wallace and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Norwich local who were appointed to the evening committee secured credentials from the delegates attending. The twenty-three delegates were called to order by William Fitzgerald, secretary of the Norwich local and president of the C. L.